

HANFORD SITE BADGES AND THE REAL ID ACT

January 2016

Fact Sheet

UPDATE: Washington State, Illinois, Missouri, and New Mexico were NOT granted extensions from compliance with REAL ID. Effective 1/11/2016, standard driver's licenses and photo ID cards issued by these states will NO longer be accepted as a single form of identification for badging and access to the Hanford Site.

The REAL ID Act (REAL ID), passed by Congress in 2005, established minimum standards for issuing driver's licenses and state identification (ID) cards. REAL ID prohibits federal agencies from accepting driver's licenses and state-issued credentials for the purpose of accessing federal facilities from states that do not meet the standards.

Driver's licenses and state ID cards from non-REAL ID compliant states will not be accepted as proof of identification for accessing Hanford facilities, without also presenting an acceptable second form of identification.

For additional information about the REAL ID Act, visit <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief>.

Who is affected by REAL-ID?

Anyone who is requesting a badge to access the Hanford Site or any DOE or DOE-contractor owned or leased facility. This includes:

- New hires
- Subcontractors
- Delivery drivers
- Vendors
- Tour participants
- Visitors
