A publication of the U.S. Department of Energy for all Hanford Site employees

SHOWING WE CARE: Department of Energy employees volunteered for work parties on May 17, the third annual DOE "Day of Caring" to help United Way agencies. Work projects ranged from small construction jobs and maintenance to planting and yard work. DOE employees brought their own tools and in many cases purchased their own supplies. Employees of the DOE Office of the Associate Manager for Science and Technology worked at La Clinica in Pasco, where Marcus Glasper (bottom right) cleans an examination room and Ken Capsi (center) does cleanup work outside. Elsewhere, Lance Mamiya and Ted Pietrok (top left) help lay the subflooring for a La Clinica-sponsored homebuilding project. Marla Marvin (top right) of the DOE Richland Operations Office leans into a shovel while doing yard work for an elderly Kennewick couple. At bottom left, Jennifer Sands and Max Cooper-Ford of the Office of River Protection pause for our photographer while cleaning a kitchen at the United Way office.
